how can otherwise normal moral persons as citizens voters and jurors participate in a process that is designed to take the life of another in death by design research psychologist craig haney argues that capital punishment and particularly the sequence of events that lead to death sentencing itself is maintained through a complex and elaborate social psychological system that distances and disengages us from the true nature of the task relying heavily on his own research and that of other social scientists haney suggests that these social psychological forces enable persons to engage in behavior from which many of them otherwise would refrain however by facilitating death sentencing in these ways this inter related set of social psychological forces also undermines the reliability and authenticity of the process and compromises the fairness of its outcomes because these social psychological forces are systemic in nature built into the very system of death sentencing itself haney concludes by suggesting a number of inter locking reforms derived directly from empirical research on capital punishment that are needed to increase the fairness and reliability of the process the historic and ongoing public debate over the death penalty takes place not only in courtrooms but also in classrooms offices and living rooms this timely book offers stimulating insights into capital punishment for professionals and students working in psychology law criminology sociology and cultural area studies as capital punishment receives continued attention in the media it is also a necessary and provocative guide that empowers all readers to come to their own conclusions about the death penalty

franklin pierre honeywell is one of washington dc s best known fashion designers a man with an acerbic personality he comes to al pennyback claiming that someone is threatening his life at the urging of his partner heather bunche al takes the case even though he develops a dislike for his new client he finds a number of people with good reason to dislike honeywell from the models who work for him and who he abuses horribly to his former partner and lover calvin rigg who is now one of his main competitors after checking a long list of suspects al comes to the conclusion that honeywell is indeed being threatened but despite having initially thinking rigg might be the author of the threats is convinced that he s innocent worse none of the other suspects seem valid either when honeywell s assistant tina wittmer finds him in his studio with a pair of scissors protruding from his chest al finds himself caught up in a murder investigation the police find evidence at the scene implicating rigg and arrest him rigg s attorney hires al to prove his client s innocence al has to deal with heather s fascination with the fashion scene as he goes back over his original investigation to see what he might have missed along with heather his girl friend sandra winter is also a fan of fashion dragging him to a fashion show where he s bored and distracted in a dream al s late wife tells him to look close to home for an answer to the mystery he is stymied until he learns that the victim left his business to tina a talented but inexperienced designer when he learns that tina is like the victim a cocaine addict with paranoid tendencies he begins to think that his original view that she was just an innocent bystander was wrong but he can't tie her to the scene at the time of death or to the evidence found near honeywell's body convinced of tina's guilt al uses logic old fashioned snooping and a modicum of dumb luck to find the missing pieces of a puzzle nearly becoming a victim himself when tina's accomplice larry roach a male model nearly skewers him with another pair of scissors in solving the case al discovers the true meaning of close to home it wasn't just the fact that the killer was the person closest to the victim but inside himself he'd made the mistake of overlooking tina because she seemed such an innocent he missed the clear signs of her drug addiction ambition and paranoia treating her as one of the invisible support people who are always around but never noticed paris fashion week the pinnacle of the fashion industry a global spectacle where dreams are made careers are launched and fortunes are won or lost it is a world of breathtaking beauty where designers pour their hearts and souls into their creations and models grace the runway with an ethereal grace that captures the imagination of the world but beneath the dazzling facade of this glamorous world a darker truth lurks a truth of ruthless ambition cutthroat competition and a relentless pursuit of success at any cost this is the world that lena valente a renowned fashion designer knows all too well she's on the cusp of unveiling her latest collection a masterpiece of artistry and innovation that promises to redefine the boundaries of haute couture but tragedy strikes when one of her top models is found dead a victim of a chilling mystery that threatens to unravel everything she's built as the police dismiss the death as an accident lena senses something sinister at play driven by a desire for justice and a fierce sense of protectiveness for her team lena joins forces with theo dupont an investigative journalist with a keen eye for uncovering the truth together they plunge into the opulent but treacherous world of fashion where secrets are guarded fiercely and the price of truth can be deadly as they unravel the intricate web of deceit they discover that the killer is not just seeking to destroy lives but to silence anyone who dares to expose the industry's hidden secrets with each passing moment the stakes escalate forcing lena and theo to confront a killer who will go to any lengths to protect their own agendas this is a story about the pursuit of truth the dangers of ambition and the enduring power of human resilience in the face of darkness
